Hongkong, September 5th, 1873.

Ir is a matter of common remark that people will do in their collective capacity things with regard to which, as individuals, they would justly besitate. The division of responsibility has a peculiar effect upon peoples' moral susceptibilities, and makes men of the most upright intentions parties to actions which, if they looked into them carefully, would cause them to shrink back in alarm. Governments, Boards, and Committees are thus notorious for doing things: which no individual composing them would think of. An instance of this in Hongkoug has come before our notice in a variety of forms, and we think it right to call attention to the fact, as, unless some steps be taken · in the matter, there appears to be a possibility

It is unnecessary to specify more particularly the case to which we allude, than to say that it has arisen in connection with him a saucy black devil. He thereon arrested one of the public Companies, which has fallen into temporary difficulties from unforescen circumstances, and which, we hear from numerous sources, has refused to pay claims made by its own servants, and other liabilities of the like description. We are confident that the gentlemen who have the immediate management of the affairs of the Company are not taking this course from any improper motives, or fromlack of a duesense of honour. Their position and respectability proclude any such view of the subject, and it appears that in some degree the course of action has been unavoidable; but still the fact remains that amounts which anyone of the Directors, as a private indivithan refuse, are allowed to remain unsettled. asked the price of a pair of trowsers, and be up in the mutter. We had supposed that that to the serious inconvenience of men who can the present occasion, but the subject has a general bearing of scarcely less importance, him, by slapping him on the arm, and giving document will be sufficient to show how very that is, as it affects the credit and good him a blow on the neck. The defendant re- different can be the opinions of the ex-Minister name of Hongkong. It can hardly be believed that if, proper attention be called to the matter, it will be allowed to go on as at present. Something should surely be done. Liabilities to the servants of any concern are always regarded, if not strictly legally in all cases, at least as a matter of honour, as preference claims; and, therefore, there can be no injury worked to anyone by these amounts being paid. It cannot be believed that an important Company would allow such matters to remain ultimately unsettled, and it would, therefore, be a wise policy to make an effort in some way to nieet them at once. The credit of the Colony is also to some extent. involved in the question, as it would certainly be something new that any serious difficulty should be experienced in obtaining their pay would be to carry matters further than would be the case in any other part of the world, and would be an action which all who desire to see the good name of the Colony sustained, would feel to be a subject of the deepest regret. No doubt, the apathy which has been manifested results in some degree from the affair being one of those which is considered not more the business of one man than of another; but the true view of the subject is that, as a matter of honour, it is the business of all concerned

It may seem rather hardto suggest to losing sharoholders an additional sacrifice, but, if it should happen that there to not the ideans of paying the employes of the concern, it would seem only right that an additional contribution should be made by the shareholders-which would not be much from each individual-to meet these liabilities.

At Daub- Indo-Chinese Sugar Company-87 per cent. bill, just on the boundary of the borough, a house chimney was struck, and the lightning passed out of the door, leaving uninjured a couple of lodgers, who were seated on the step. The chimney of the co-operative brick shed in Willows-lane, was also burled to the ground. and the man who was inside was struck by the Electric fluid, and would have fallen had be not been enught by another man. In several other parts of the town great damage was done.

A heavy thunderstorm broke over Huddersfield and neighbourhood about five o'clock on Wedmesday morning, accompained with very vivid lightning and heavy rain. The lightning struck a house about a male from the town, occupied by a man named Gibson, who was in bed with his wife, rendering the latter insensible for several minutes. It then melted the gas-pipe, and set the house on fire, but little damage was done. Shortly before six o'clock a violent thunderstorm, accompanied by rain, burst over Leeds. The lightning struck the house of Mr. Shackleton, corn factor, and the housemaid. Ann Naylor, was killed. Mr. T. Buck, a retired Bradford merchant, was also struck and killed. At Bradford a woman was struck, but no lives were lost.

At Richmond, Yorkshire, the storm raged with great violence until seven o'clock in the morning; in some parts of the town the paving TO HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR, stones were ploughed up, and the sand lay so thick that men have been engaged lading it for To. A young man, named Clew, a farmer, living at Wood House, was struck by the lightning, and he became blinded for some time, but ultimately recovered, and his watch, which was in his trousers' pocket, was completely smashed.

At Liverpool the heat of the previous days had been excessive, and on Tuesday was most intense, the thermometer marking 124 degrees in the sun in the afternoon. Towards eveningthe western sky became clouded, and in a short space of time the town was enveloped by the - storm clouds, the thunder and lightning being almost appalling, and accompanied by torrents of rain which flooded cellars and streets in the lower portions of the town. The violence of the storm abated later on, but until midnight there were frequent flushes of lightning and peals of thunder. Several houses and baildings were injured.

At Gilmoss, near Liverpool, a barn on the farm of Mr. Wright, on the Groxteth estate, was struck and burnt out, though the roof-was of slate. Fortunately there was no grain in store, and the horses were rescued without in-storm passed over Preston on Tuesday night from south-west. From 8.30 until 9.30 the lightning was almost incessant, sheet and forked lightning appearing at the same instant. and the accompanying claps of thunder were terrific. Many of the flashes of forked light-- ning seemed to be composed of small rings of fire, and others had the appearance of zig-zag chains of stars. It was an awfully magnificent sight, the dread splendour of the electric fluid being beyond description. Rain fell in torrents | for about two hours, coming a sudden rise of several feet in the river. Ribble, and the lowlying streets of the towns were temporarily flooded. A young woman walking on the banks of the river was blinded by the lightning for a short time. A man and two horses were instantaneously killed by a flash of lightning at a stable door in Hutton, near Preston; and in TOHN SKINKER, SAN FRANCISCO, Grunsargh, another neighbouring township, three men were struck dead, as they were returning from a hayfield in a cart. RURAL EVENING. FROM " SEARCHING THE NET." When frogs pipe out in dripping dykes, And autumn wolds are sallow; When pigeons leave the stubble spikes, And homeward oxen bellow.

Then, as the dun air dims the blue. The ditoler and his fellow Come drenched knce-deep in pasture dew And foot-clogged from the fallow; The black frost in the white frost's wake Drops apples ero they mellow. The pale sun dies behind the brake, The vapour rises yellow.

A lass against the mill-pool gate, Where dips the latest swallow, Has set her basket down to wait Some sheepish country fellow. Her rosy cheek is ripe to kiss, But ours are lank and bollow : Her sun is high, ours low as this That obbs o'er glooming fallow. Our life as this fair day departs; Our rusty bones will follow. Where heary heads and weary hearts Rest on a churchyard pillow. With her the wine of youth is bright,

Death's potion we must swallow. Time tires the soaring eagle's flight, Time plumes the nestling callow: And some a wind bound source must keep In shoal and glassy shallow; While one must sail the central deep ... Where termoil tears the billow. One wones in calm the vocal nine, One lives a genial fellow;

The glory of the garden rose Exceeds the wayside mallow. The awan arrayed in pearly snows Outvies the russet swallow. Who can predict each wortal's guo!, A throne-step or a gallows; But we will save a merry soul. And leave our judgment fallow. Age shall not sour us into ancers, As yields a wave-washed willow, We to his weight of tidal years Will bend our branches sallow. When ways are dim and daylight spent,

When cold wind whistles hollow,

Come, where bright faces and content

My ingle-corner hallow. - .

One bristles like a procupine

Or prickly rock-set aloc.

There logs increase the heat, old friend. There ale rune amber yellow. A waning light is ours to spend. A guttered end of tallow. Come, link in mine thy hand and drink, And let this sentence follow,-That sweeter tastes the bowl, whose brink The lips of friendship mellow.

RECOLLECTIONS OF STERNE

The reader will now stand with me at the old gates of Preston Castle. At the south em side of those broad meadows we can rebuild, in fancy, the quaint embattled residence. And we may see a tall thin, strange figure passing out into the narrow lane, hedged with hawthorn and holly. It is · Yorick going back to The Hoo. Those sly, comic features which Lavater speaks of-the expressive features of "the arch, satirical Sterne "-wear a look of triumphant humour. He has just made a sketch of Captain Hinde, and feels that it will be his masterplece. The work will be true to nature, but he will finish it with the thousand graceful touches of his unique pencil, and give it the rich costume and colour of the bygone days of 'Marlborough, The bright eyes of Yorick's pule face grow brighter with the inspiration of genius, and he rides away in his gayest mood; certain to be more brilliant than ever at Lord Dacie's-Macmillan's Magazine.

THE BALLYVOURNEY REGATTA. (From " Sporting Rambles and Holiday Papers," by William Barry:) The Protestants and the Catholics of Ballyvourney were pretty equally divided; if anything, there was a preponderance of numbers towards the latter; but the former made up for this by better organisation and system. The first bone of contention at the regatta parliament would be the appointment of a man to discharge a cannon at the commencement of every race. The discharge of artillery was a feature of the Ballyvourney aquatics. A shot was fired at the start; another when the first boat came in, another for the second, and two when the pig was puny, are prepared to grant Marino risks at taken off the pole which hung over the water, with a union-jack waving about the grunting porker, in order to give a maritime kind of excuse of this apparently unregatta-like diversion. Now, there were two gunsmiths the gunpowder-sellers in Ballyrourney; one went to church, and the other went to mass; and the inhabitants bought whatever they wanted of Curtis and Harvey or Pigou (both "glazed and blasting") from their respective co-religionists, purveyors of explosive compounds and meerschaums. The Protestant gunsmith was ultimately appointed, and when the morning of the regatta dawned his platform over the sea-wall; and a lively place Ballyvourney was then! The Scullahoue lioys, from the Scullahone River, in flanuel jackets, arrived to contend for the second pulling-race. Against them, and at mortal foud with them, the heroes of a neighbouring headland, called Drumvarrig, were to contend. It was necessary to have a boat full of policemen between these gentry until the word or signal was given for the start, and across the police-boat they keptup the most fearful war of words in Gaelic, with constant five pounds, and for this amount they were Protestant artilleryman stands to his gun, Current Rates. and off it goes with a tremendous report, leaving the ears deaf, and in the air the mos awful and depressing stench conceivable. This time they are made to give each other a wide berth, and pull fairly enough antil they reach the flag-boat. Here they are seen, by the aid of a glass, to have fouled again, and there is a general impression that Mickey Donovon, who is in the flag-boat, will be murdered between them. A magistrate and a priest pursue in the police-bout, and only arrive just in time to pick up the crew of the Drumyarrig craft, whose sides have been staved in by the Scullahonites. The latter, having their antagonists in the water, are trying to hit them on the head as they float about. A rescue is effected by the authorities. Meanwhile, Mickey Donovan who had been anchored in the flag-boat, has disappeared, and so has his boat.
